an old miner of years' experience. He went over the ground with me, and he pointed out many things to me which might have otherwise escaped me. He thinks that it is the greatest copper prospect in the world, and only needs development to bring out its worth."

"I found Ubehebe all that was claimed for it, and more," said W. E. G. Hitchens, "and the manner in which it is being developed is particularly fine. I have brought a sack of the stuff with me, and if the copper in all the mountain is anything like that, the value of it cannot be determined, and there is enough there to last a lifetime."

W. B. Allen of Norfolk, Va., is another enthusiast on Ubehebe, and is very glad that he made the trip for more reasons than one.

"The more one thinks of what he has seen, the more impressed he is," said he, "in fact the entire trip has been singularly interesting from all standpoints. In the East the people picture the men of the West as holdups and thugs, but here we slept in a tent at Ubehebe and left our valuables and our money where we could best find room for them and not a thing was molested. We went over a vast expanse of territory and we saw copper, high grade and low grade, wherever we went. I think that everybody is so pleased with his trip that results will follow. I do not think that there is a man who went down to Ubehebe who did not come back a stockholder. Mr. Salisbury has made a most favorable impression on the entire party. A more delightful host I never met. We were mostly strangers to him when we arrived, but he has won us all by his straightforward and hearty manner, and by his way of imparting to us all that we desired to know. In fact, I never saw such a lot of courteous people, and so much of the glad hand as I have met in Nevada."

"The copper is the most beautiful I ever saw," said Gerald Hill, "and it doesn't take a mineralogist to see it. The time is coming when you will see a big town at Ubehebe, and there, to my mind, is the opportunity for the young man of the East. The young chaps of the East couldn't find a better place to come to and settle and to grow up with the country."

"I am thinking, still thinking," said Edwin Thomas, the multi-millionaire of Pennsylvania. "It is almost too much to grasp at once." It certainly is a wonderful showing, and I want more time in which to think it all out and to express myself."

"This is my second trip here," said E. G. Hirons, "and all I can say is that I am more infatuated with the proposition than ever. It is magnificent: it is wonderful."

Not a man in the entire party was there who did not express similar sentiments to those who have been quoted. Mr. Salsberry and Ray Baker, his mine manager, came up from Ubehebe with the party, and had a farewell dinner with them in the Idlewild, and the kindest sentiments were expressed, and there was a great waving of handkerchiefs and hats as the train moved out and the Ubehebe party started on their homeward way.

NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The opening prices of the stock market today showed a bad break over Saturday's closing, but the market soon steadied and almost immediately after became quieter. The rise of two and a quarter points in New York Central helped the market immensely, and upon this there was a gradual but comprehensive recovery of declines. Bonds were weak with little or no business.

The Trust Company of America, which had been closed since the inception of the unsettled financial conditions, and the Lincoln Trust Company opened for business at the usual hour this morning. The resumption of both institutions brought a distinct feeling of relief. A committee of experts, appointed Saturday for the purpose, went over the

JUST WHERE WE STAND.

The truth is best at all times. The truth of the present time is that we are in a bad way from a financial point of view, and we are going to be that way for sometime to come. We are going to be there until the stocks of this country begin to move into their proper values. Things have been going on from bad to worse, but the pendulum cannot always swing the same way; it has got to drop and swing back the other way sometime, and the indications on all hands are that the time has arrived when the swing in the other direction has been started.

What we want now, and want badly, is money. And money is being shipped into the country as fast as it can be diverted in this direction from abroad. The summary of yesterday's happenings in the financial world is encouraging. On every hand we see the loosening of the strings of financial stringency. There have been millions and millions of dollars poured into the banks to save the country's credit, and the object has been accomplished. The big money will come from abroad when the crops have been moved. Our crops have been most successful, the largest ever. The question is to move them. The President has promised his aid in moving them; the agents of English houses are securing assistance from home to aid in this purpose. A deal was accomplished yesterday by means of which more money will be poured into the banks, and stock security released. Today is a holiday, and before another business day dawns there will be eight million dollars arrive from England and plenty more to follow.

In the various States the bank, or clearing house certificate, is taking the place of money, and is being used to the satisfaction of everybody. That may not have a good look, but it means that it is making the necessity of real money the less, and that it is helping the situation that much more.

In our own city two banks that have been suspended are seeking to open upon the certificate basis, and they are meeting with success. This will help. It will be a year in each instance before we can get all our money, but we will be getting something, and if the times grow better, meantime, the entire amounts will be paid so much the sooner. With these two banks open, we will know that all danger to them has passed, and we can have the assurance that this will be another aid to the situation.

The situation is not of the very best, but we can see light ahead through the gloom.

W. W. Booth, proprietor, and J. S. Daveler, manager, of the Bonanza, left for Los Angeles on Sunday morning, taking with them a large number of the issue of Sunday's paper. Messrs. Booth and Daveler will remain in the City of Angels for about ten days exploiting the camps of southern Nevada, and giving special attention to Manhattan. They will visit the newspaper offices, meet with the railroad people and talk with the principal business men of Los Angeles, who are desirous of getting this trade. They will show them how the trade is to be had, namely by interesting themselves personally in the country. Their object is not to boom any particular section, but to tell the truth about all. The truth about any and all camps at this time is sufficient to arouse the investor, and the trip of Messrs. Booth and Daveler is sure to be fruitful of results to the country.

A viceless Eden has been discovered in Alaska by Dr. George B. Gordon, curator of the University of Pennsylvania. There crime and vice is unknown. It is a question whether the professor's report will tempt immigration. If it does, what a change will be witnessed in that earthly paradise!

The clearing of the financial skies and the announcement at the same time that the nation's baseball crisis has been passed, gives us a chance to breathe way down deep again.

TODAY IS THE DAY IN SAN FRANCISCO

(By Associated Press)

(By Associated Press).
SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—To-morrow the voters of this city will select officers for the coming year. The betting favors Dr. Edward Robson Taylor, appointed after the removal of Eugene E. Schmitz, for the mayoralty, but the friends of Daniel A. Ryan confidently predict his election by a good vote. It seems to be the impression that P. H. McCarthy, union labor nominee, will run third for mayor. It is certain that the so-called good government and democratic supervisors, most of whom are incumbents, will be returned to office.

The real fight centers on the district attorneyship. Frank McGowan endeavoring to defeat William H. Langdon, incumbent, prosecutor of the graft cases. Langdon's friends predict his election by the largest majority ever given a candidate for office.

The betting favors Taylor by 2 to 1. Very little money, however, will exchange hands on the result of the election.
